Help?

HOOPS is an afterschool program that provides students with opportunities to engage in homework, long-range projects or research, and/or study for tests, either individually or in small groups, with the assistance of a teacher. This program will serve as an extension of the extra-help offered by each classroom teacher during the week.

HOOPS has a drop-in format, which allows students to take advantage of the available support twice each week and as often as needed. Some students may be encouraged to attend, by guidance counselors or other school personnel, as the result of their performance in particular courses. The program provides a designated time and space for homework completion, as well as organizational, time-management, and study skills development. Snacks, as well as text books and school supplies are available to students who attend HOOPS.

HOOPS will be staffed by teachers from English, Math, Science, Social Studies, Special Education and World Languages. The staff members will assist students with homework, projects, studying, test preparation, organization of work, time management, etc.
