"It was clear to the bottom and bright with the efflorescence of tropical week and corral" (12).	This quote shows the authors vivid descriptions. I have snorkeled in the Caribbean and Hawaii and have seen water like this. Reading this description brings a clear picture into my mind.
"S'right. It's a shell! I seen one like that before. On somebody's back wall. A conch he called it. He used to blow it and then his mum would come. It's ever so valuable" (15).	Ralph and Piggy find a conch shell on the beach and they decide that if they blow it, the other boys might hear it and come. They can use it to call a meeting. The conch is a symbol of civilization and order. They boy who holds the conch is allowed to speak. In my class, we have to be holding an eraser to speak. The eraser signifies to the class that whoever holds it has the authority to speak.
"And in the middle of them, with filthy body, matted hair, and unwiped nose, Ralph wept for the end of innocence, the darkness of man's heart and the fall through the air of the true, wise friend called Piggy" (202).	Ralph knows that his life will be saved, but he is changed forever by his experiences on the island. He realizes he's sunk to a savage level and weeps for the end of innocence and the darkness of man's heart which are two themes of the book. I hope that I never have to live through that kind of lesson in life – that I can learn some of the harder lessons from others rather than having to go through them myself.
"No roads, no trails, no clearings. Just the lakes, and it came to him that he would have to use a lake for landing. If he went down into the trees he was certain to die" (23).	I can't imagine keeping my cool in a situation like this. I'd be on my cell phone, panicking and he is trying to land the plane! It's really important to keep your cool in a crisis.
"Stanley's father was smart and had a lot of perseverance. Once he started a project he would work on it for years, often going on for days" (8).	I think that in order to be successful in anything, you have to have perseverance. People who give up easily cannot accomplish anything. It also helps to have a passion for what you are doing. People who have this passion can spend hours working even realizing it. Stanley's father not only had perseverance, but also passion for it work.
"The flower garden was strained with rotting brown magnolia petals and iron weeds grew rank amid the purple phlox...the last graveyard flowers were blooming" (1).	From the onset of the story, Hurst creates the image of death through his description of the dying flowers and specific reference to the "graveyard flowers." The tone is heavy and dark creating a sense of foreboding. It is clear that the beauty of the story may be part of the sadness. I think this means someone might be sick or die.
